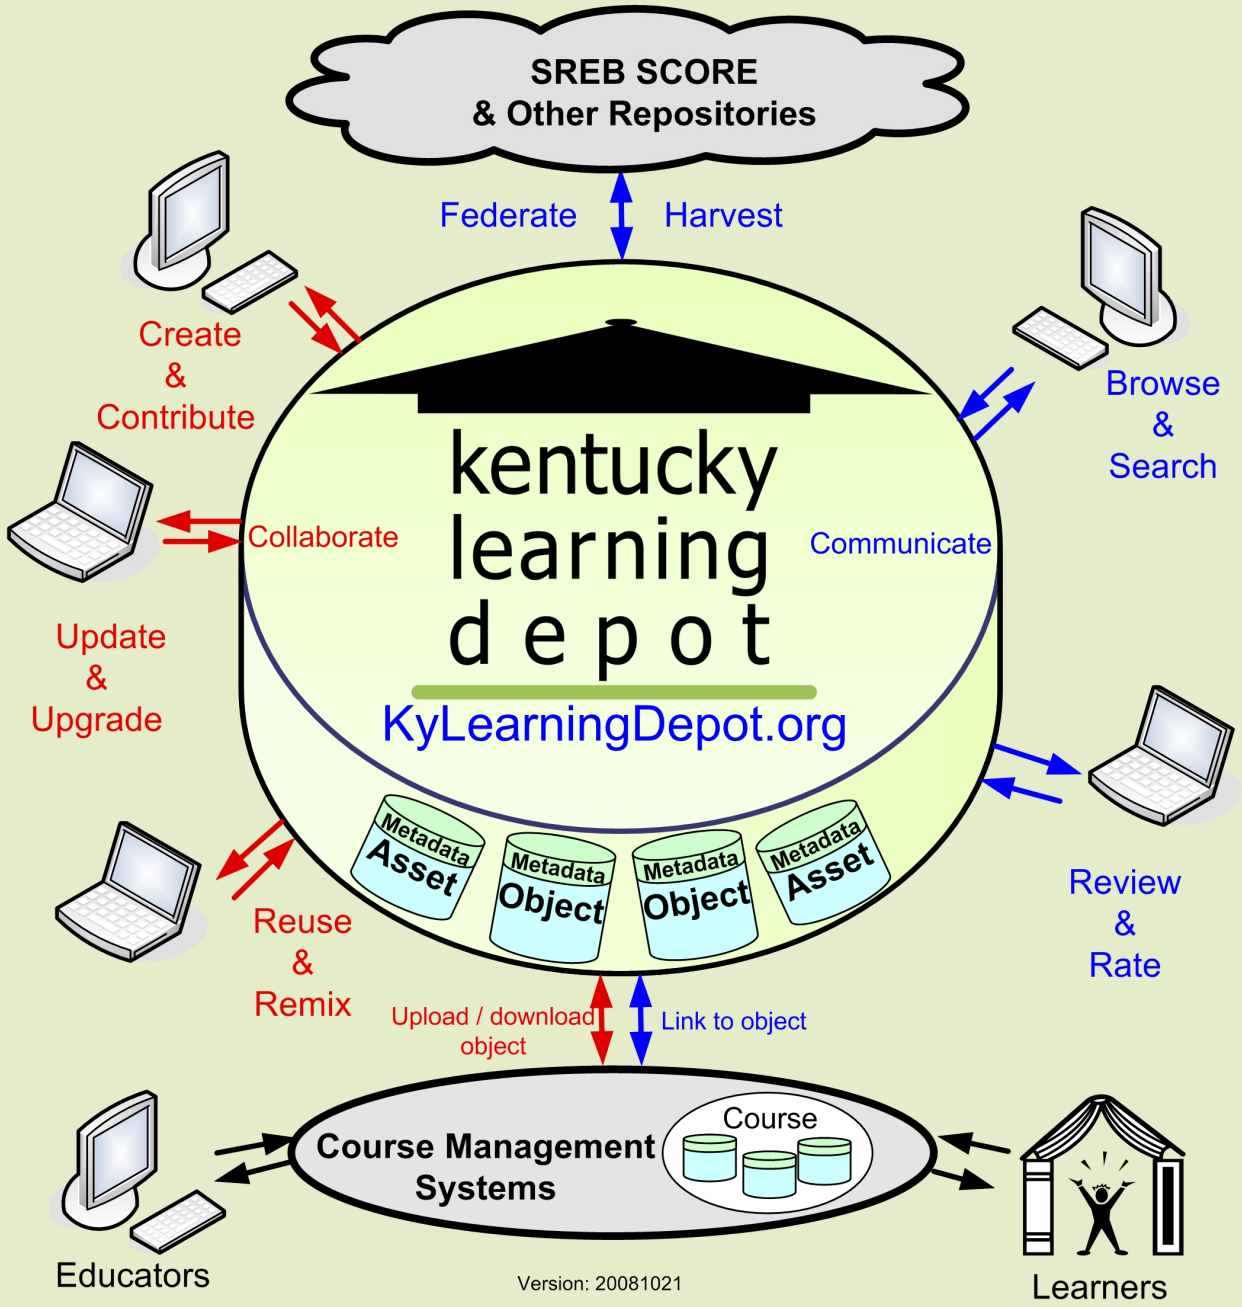
What Is A Repository?



- A digital library that holds learning content
- A place that stores metadata about learning content
- A single point of entry where users can browse, search, upload, download, update, and reuse learning content
- A learning community where educators can review, rate, comment and collaborate on learning content
- Repositories can be compatible and interoperable with most course management systems (CMS) and other repositories.